Where to find stuff in Singapore that's not tested on animals.

ACRES
Animal Concerns Research & Education Society

What is animal testing?

Hundreds of thousands of rabbits, mice, rats and other animals are poisoned, blinded and killed every year in outdated and unnecessary experiments to test cosmetics, toiletries, hairsprays, shampoos, cleaners and other household products.

These experiments involve cruel and painful procedures such as dripping concoctions into animals' eyes and rubbing substances into raw, shaved skin to check for reactions. Not to mention force-feeding animals with chemicals until they are poisoned and die.

And it's not like these tests are useful. There are already over 8,000 ingredients known to be safe and effective. In addition, there is a range of safety testing alternatives to animal testing which do not involve animals, such as using tissue cultures and in-vitro tests.

Thankfully, there are corporations out there that have chosen to be compassionate. Some have put an end to animal testing. Others have never tested on animals. And it's these companies that we request you to support.

How to be a cruelty-free shopper.

This guide is designed to help you find stuff that has not been tested on animals. Some of these things are also suitable for vegetarians and vegans. It's correct at the time of going to press in 2009. Updates to this list are posted at www.acres.org.sg

All of the companies on this guide have been approved by one of two schemes (or sometimes both):

1. Humane Cosmetics Standard (HCS) / Humane Household Products Standard (HHPS) (International)
2. Choose Cruelty Free (CCF) (Australia-based)

Products that conform to the Humane Cosmetics Standard (HCS) or the Humane Household Products Standard (HHPS) often bear a leaping bunny logo. Do note, however, that the leaping bunny may not always be printed on the products.

The HCS and HHPS schemes were established in 1996 by an international coalition of animal protection groups from Europe and North America, including the British Union for the Abolition of Vivisection (BUAV). A company approved by either of these schemes no longer tests or commissions animal testing for its products.

Choose Cruelty-Free (CCF) is an Australian based, independent, non-profit organization that accredits companies which do not test their products or ingredients on animals for cosmetics, toiletries or household products.

This booklet lists the HCS/HHPS and CCF approved products that are known to be available in Singapore. You can find a comprehensive list of international products with regular updates at www.gocrueltyfree.org and at www.choosecrueltyfree.org.au

How you can help end product testing on animals.

Only buy products which have not been tested on animals.

Write to supermarkets and retailers asking them to stock more products which have not been tested on animals, that are HCS, HHPS or CCF approved.

Write to manufacturers of cosmetics, toiletries and household products which are not approved under these schemes. Tell them you will not buy their products until they are HCS, HHPS or CCF approved.

Spread the word. Make your friends and family aware of animal testing and of the cruelty-free alternatives available to them.

Help ACRES help animals.

ACRES (Animal Concerns Research & Education Society) is a Singapore-based animal protection charity and Institution of Public Character (IPC).

We aim to foster respect and compassion for all animals, improve the living conditions and welfare of animals in captivity and educate people on lifestyle choices which do not involve the abuse of animals and which are environment-friendly. Our vision is a world where animals are treated with compassion and respect.

We do need funds to continue our projects, including our promotion of cruelty-free lifestyles.

A gift from you will help us to achieve our goals and make a huge difference in ending animal suffering.
